The Garden That Is Different

GOOD GARDENS are made only with strong, vigorous plants. These we offer at HILDEMERE.
Advice as to selection and culture freely given.

*Today I had an understanding hour
Wherein I saw, as with new gift of power,
The lovely opening petals of a flower.*

*Fragrance and form and hue combine and cling
Around its golden-stamened wedding ring,
Wherefrom shall many another flower spring.*

*Men harbor thoughts of death and doom;
But I can never wholly yield to gloom,
Watching gay flowers in generations bloom.*

*Today, by wonder of the flower taught,
Bright vision through a child's clear eyes I caught:
The lovelier opening petals of a thought.*

*Color and form can hold but for a space
A blossom's contour, or a thoughtful face;
Then these escape into some freer place.*

*Many there are who mourn that we must go,
That flowers must fade. I am not troubled so,
Watching high thoughts through generations grow.*

*So do I share infinities of power;
So do I live in hope's immortal hour;
So have I seen all beauty in a flower.*
